INJUSTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

The Waukegan Gazette Accuses County Treasurer of Unfair Treatment

LARGEST DELINQUENT LIST

Property Holders Along the North Shore do not Feel Very Kindly Toward Ames on Account of Tax Sales

The Waukegan Gazette of last Saturday states that there is some dissatisfaction in regard to the delinquent tax sale of recent date and in regard to the matter has the following to say:

By reason of County Treasurer Ames advertising the delinquent tax list for 1909 taxes in the Antioch Advertiser, a paper which has no circulation on the North Shore where most all the delinquent property is located, and a circulation practically nowhere outside of Antioch village, there has just closed one of the largest tax sales ever held in Lake county, 2,471 sales. The greatest number of sales ever made in the county prior to this was when ex-County Treasurer Murray advertised in a paper of the same village.

The object of advertising delinquent tax list is to give property owners an opportunity to meet their taxes before sale and not for the purpose of benefiting some printer who is just starting a newspaper and desirous of putting in a linotype machine or a press. Neither is the object to benefit a few tax sharks at the expense of many tax payers who are ever-burdened with high taxes and special assessments, without a penalty of 25 per cent added to amounts already levied and extended against their property, which is the case if their property is sold at tax sale.

It has been intimated that this same treasurer has aspiration for a continuation as a county officer. Whether this is so or not we are unable to say but should it prove true no doubt he will solicit the support of the owners of the 2,471 pieces of property sold for the benefit of no one but the gentlemen who participated in the tax sale and benefited $7,500, which is 25 per cent added to the amount of $30,000 estimated of the sale just closed.

Is a public officer one who is supposed to look after the interests of the people who elect him to office or is he to look after the interests of some printer and a few tax sharks?

The Lake Shore Towns have two-thirds of the whole number of descriptions in the county and dozens of their pieces were sold where, had they been able to determine that their property was in the delinquent list published, they would have come in and paid their taxes before their property was sold.

The Gazette and Sun received dozens of letters from residents of other cities who own property in Lake county asking for copies of the paper containing delinquent taxes, their conclusions naturally being that the important publication would be printed in one of the two leading papers of the county instead of being shoved off to an obscure publication where nobody would see it unless they specially wrote for it. The same is true of many Waukegan people who never knew where the list was printed this year.

Accordingly, many of 2,471 delinquents do not feel very kindly over their treatment for many insist they would have paid their taxes had they had it called to their attention as is the purpose of the law in publishing the list each year.

And, furthermore, instead of all the work of setting up the big delinquent tax list being given where Lake county labor could do it, much of it was done in Chicago and that which was done in Lake county was done in a non-union shop, a fact which does not set very well on the labor unions of Lake county who believe all work let by the county of Lake should be given to union labor.

TWO FIRES AT SILVER LAKE

Fourth of July Celebration Marred by Two Conflagrations

The Fourth of July celebration in Schenning's Grove at Silver Lake on Monday was marred by two fires. At about 3:30 o'clock George Bartlett and Edward Garrett discovered smoke coming from under the front porch of the Schenning Hotel and after giving the alarm immediately set to work, in true firemanlike manner, ripping up the floor of the porch so as to better enable them to fight the flames.

In the meantime others busied themselves preparing the hose which had been used in sprinkling the driveways and lawn and which was fortunately near at hand. After a few moments' hard work the fire was extinguished before any great damage was done.

It is supposed that a fire cracker accidentally thrown under the porch was the cause.

Later near 5:00 o'clock the alarm of fire was again sounded and this time it was found that the conflagration was of a far more serious nature, that the saloon building of W. W. Bernhoeft situated on the west side of the railroad track was on fire and that the flames had already broken through the roof in several places.

At this fire also Antioch distinguished herself, Village Clerk L. M. Hughes taking the initiative and leading the band of villagers and picnickers, who lent willing hands, but the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the burning building and it was with difficulty that the flames were kept from spreading to other nearby buildings.

The Bernhoeft building was a one story frame structure and was completely destroyed.

The origin of the fire is not known.

WM. MADDEN SUCCEUMS TO ALCOHOLISM

William Madden of Chicago, an employee of Oetting Bros. Ice company, died at their Channel Lake ice house on Sunday evening at about 4:00 o'clock. Madden had brought a horse and buggy out from Chicago Sunday, arriving at the ice house about 4:45 o'clock in the afternoon. He appeared to be in good health and talked with Mr. Oetting for some time, afterward going to his room upstairs.

When supper was prepared and he was called no response was made and upon investigating he was found lying upon his bunk apparently dead. Dr. Warriner and Undertaker James were summoned and upon examining the body the doctor pronounced life extinct.

Coroner Taylor was then summoned and on Monday at noon an inquest was held, the jury returning a verdict of death from alcoholism.

The remains were shipped to Chicago on the 4:31 train Monday.

Madden was about forty years old and had a wife and three children but owing to his ungovernable appetite for liquor and his inability or indisposition to support them, his wife found it necessary to separate from him and for five years past she has been doing family washing to support and educate the children. It is rumored that Madden carried $1000 life insurance but to whom the policy was made out cannot be learned.

OLD RESIDENT OF MILLBURN PASSED AWAY

Tuesday morning of this week marked the passing away of another one of Lake county's old and highly respected residents when Mrs. A. S. McCredie died at her home near Millburn.

The deceased was past eighty-one years of age and had been a sufferer from Bright's disease for the past four or five years, this coupled with the infirmities of age was the cause of her demise.

Mrs. McCredie was born in Scotland and in that place she grew to womanhood and was married. About fifty years ago she with her husband came to America and settled upon the farm in the vicinity of Millburn and upon that place they have resided continuously ever since.

To this couple seven children were born five daughters. Mrs. John Murrie of Grayslake, Mrs. David White of Loon Lake, Mrs. D. O. Douglas of Waukegan, Mrs. Wm. Miller of Lake Villa, and Mrs. Geo. Miller of Millburn and two sons, John and George both of Millburn, all of whom with the aged husband remain to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and mother.

The funeral services were held from her late home today (Thursday) and the remains will be interred in the Millburn cemetery.

SAVE YOUR DIMES

A Few Pennies Deposited in Postal Savings Bank May be Seed for Fortune

MAIN PROVISIONS OF BANK

You Can Save a Few Cents or Any Amount up to $500.00 as Your Circumstances Will Permit

A Silver ten cent piece will be all that you need to start a saving account with Uncle Sam when the new postal savings banks are installed throughout the country. The plan is this:

Uncle Sam wants to encourage thrift among the persons of small wages. He wants the child, as well as the grown up, to learn to save. Many persons spend their pennies. The postal bank will receive only regular despoisits of $1.

To encourage the saving of the squandered pennies however, the postal savings bank will issue a card representing 10 cents. Then "postal savings stamps" will be sold at 2 cents each. When the card is filled with stamps it will be accepted at the postal saving bank as a $1 deposit and placed to the account of the depositor.

Some of the features to the postal saving bank law are:

Children over 10 years old can open accounts.

Married women may have accounts in their own names and free from control or interference from their husbands.

No one will be allowed to deposit more than $100 in any one calendar month.

The balance to the credit of any persons shall never exceed $500 exclusive of accumulated interest.

Interest of 2 per cent per annum will be paid on all deposits, but no interest will be allowed on fractions of $1.

Plans with respect to putting the postal savings bank system into operation will be discussed at the last meeting of the season of the cabinet with President Taft in Washington today.

Following this meeting the board of trustees consisting of Postmaster General Hitchcock, secretary of the treasury, and attorney general, designated under the law for the control, supervision and administration of the postal savings depositories will meet and map out a systematic programme.

While no time is to be lost in arranging preliminaries, it is thought feasible according to a statement of Postmaster General Hitchcock yesterday to establish depositories for several months. The postmaster general said that the board would go over the matter in a general way at its meeting, outlining plans for organization and adopting regulations under which the business is to be conducted.

The postmaster general has appointed a committee of department officers to prepare such blank forms and instructions as will be needed to get the system started. The postal administrations of all foreign countries which have postal savings banks have been requested by the department to submit samples of their blank forms and copies of their regulations and instructions.

WATERS OF CROOKED LAKE CLAIM VICTIM

The first drowning of the season in this neighborhood occurred about 5:00 o'clock last Saturday evening when Mr. Thomas Pretty of 2349 Prairie avenue, Chicago, met death in the waters of Crooked Lake near Grady's summer resort.

He, with his wife and child, had come out that morning to spend their vacation at the resort and leaving his wife and child on the shore Mr. Pretty went in bathing. He at first appeared to be all right but of a sudden he went down, coming to the surface only once. He made no outcry.

Search was made for the body which continued until 4:15 o'clock Monday afternoon when the searchers were rewarded by finding the corpse.

Undertaker James was immediately called, who summoned Coroner Taylor and an inquest was held. The jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning. The body was shipped to Chicago on the 8:30 train Monday evening.

RETURNS CAUSES TROUBLE

The Returns of the Jeffries-Johnson Fight Causes Assault at Winthrop Harbor

HELD IN $10,000 BONDS

Negro Stabs Camp Logan Soldier who Lies in a Critical Condition at the Camp Hospital

Wednesday morning at Winthrop Harbor, Joseph Stanridge was held in $10,000 bonds to Saturday of this week at 10 o'clock on a charge of assaulting with a deadly weapon Edward Walsh, a soldier of the 7th Regiment Illinois Infantry. The attack of Stanridge on Walsh was a sensation of Tuesday morning at Niebner's saloon, north of Winthrop Harbor, following argument over the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Erwin Seebolt was arrested with Stanridge but he was dismissed as no evidence was shown against him and Justice Schwartz refused to hold him. Stanridge is still in the village jail.

Stanridge insists through his lawyer, Attorney Edwards of Waukegan, that extradition papers must be issued if he is to return to Keosauqua county, for the stabbing which may end in Walsh's death took place just over the state line, in Wisconsin, although the arrest took place in Illinois. If Walsh recovers they figure the state authorities will not bother to extradite for it would necessitate going to Springfield and Madison to get papers. Walsh is very critical, according to reports from the hospital at Camp Logan where he was taken after the stabbing. Arthur Neeples, his companion, is a Zion City young man. He was cut but slightly. Stanridge has lived in Winthrop several years.

The two men injured were in the saloon accompanied by a negro. Stanridge and Seebolt came in late in the evening and asked information in regard to the fight; when told that Johnson had won they immediately started to make trouble with the negro and the two men with him. Finally the two from Camp Logan and the negro went out of the saloon and it is claimed the others followed and continued the quarrel. By this time the negro had left and after some words it is alleged that the two men drew knives and made for the Camp Logan men. After the cutting the men were arrested.

EMILY KENNEAUGH AND JACOB VAN PATTEN MARRIED

Saturday morning of last week the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Van Patten was the scene of a quite home wedding when Mr. Van Patten's brother, Jacob Van Patten and Miss Emily Kennebaugh were united in the bonds of matrimony.

The wedding was a very quiet affair, with only a few of the nearest relatives present and with Rev. F. R. McNamee officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Patten are both well known here, the groom having been a resident of Antioch his entire life and his bride having lived here for the past three years, every since she came from the Isle of Man, to make her home in America, and during her stay here has made many warm friends among our townpeople.

After the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Van Patten left on a short wedding trip and are spending their honeymoon with relatives and friends at Chetek, Wis.

Upon their return home they will take up their residence upon the groom's farm south of town.

The news joins with their many friends in extending most hearty congratulations to the happy couple.

MURRIE RESIDENCE BURNS

House Near Grayslake Destroyed as Result of Firecrackers Setting Blaze on Roof

Firecrackers are believed to have started the burning of the roof of the Mrs. John Murrie home one mile southwest of Grayslake Monday afternoon and the house is now a mass of ruins, the contents of the lower floor being all that was saved in the fire which defied the efforts of many neighbors.

The barns were saved. Mrs. Murrie carried insurance, probably enough to almost cover the loss. She is the widow of John Murrie, who died not long ago.

The children were celebrating the Fourth of July and the belief is that somebody threw a firecracker to the roof of the porch for a fire was discovered there. The children threw water on the roof and tried hard to prevent the spreading of the flames but, despite their efforts and the help of many neighbors, the house was consumed in time.

The furniture of the lower floor was saved but all on the upper floor was lost. The fire threatened the barns but they were saved.

The house destroyed is said to be the oldest one in the western part of Lake county, being built by the father of County Clerk Al. Hendee.

AUTO CAUSES BAD ACCIDENT SATURDAY

Joseph Duncan and family, together with Mrs. Duncan's sister and husband from Waukegan, were the central figures in an accident which occurred near the Sol La Plant farm just south of town Saturday afternoon. After having been to this village the parties had started to return home at about 4:30, but had gone only as far as the La Plant place when they met an auto. Mr. Duncan, noticing that the driver of the machine was not inclined to give him half of the road, pulled his team out to one side as far as he could without driving into the ditch. The team was not much afraid of autos but were frightened at the machine passing so close and started to run. However Mr. Duncan had control of them for a short distance, until the wagon tongue broke letting the horses loose from the rig. Mr. Duncan was pulled over the dashboard and was somewhat bruised and shaken up and his brother-in-law, who was also thrown to the ground, was quite badly injured, being rendered unconscious and receiving a severe gash in the back of his head, besides being otherwise hurt.

A physician was summoned and made the injured may as comfortable as possible, and with the assistance of Mr. La Plant and others the rig was patched up and the party resumed their journey.

When the occupants of the machine saw the trouble they had caused they quickly put on speed and hurried away without even stopping to ascertain the amount of damages they had done.

TREVOR DEPOT ROBBER GETS FOUR MONTHS

Robert Murphy, alias Berry, the St. Louis man, arrested at Camp Lake a few days ago on a charge of looting the station of the Soo Line railway company at the village of Trevor, was taken before Judge Randall in the municipal court, Kenosha, on Friday afternoon and arraigned on a charge of petit larceny. He pleaded "guilty" to the charge and was sentenced to pay a fine of fifty dollars and costs. Being without money or friends the young man was sent to jail for a term of four months. It is declared that Murphy belongs to a good family in St. Louis and he insisted that this was the first time that he had been arrested. It is expected that his relatives will secure his release before the long term has been served in jail. It was impossible to put a charge of burglary against Murphy as he entered the station through an open window.

J. L. SWAYER. NOT A CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY CLERK

James L. Swayer is not to be a candidate for county clerk. He Friday issued the following formal statement.

Since the primaries of 1900, there has been a half formed intention on my part of being a candidate for the Republican nomination to the office of county clerk in the primaries of 1910.

On June 20th on being questioned I told the reporters that they might say I would seek the nomination. But my mind was not settled on the subject at that time. It is now and the fact is I will not be a candidate. There are several reasons that have caused me to finally come to this decision, but the one that decided the matter was sickness in my family and family opposition.

YOUTH COMMITS SUICIDE

Calvin Mecartney of Evanston Shoots Self at Father's Farm Near Beach

UNCONSCIOUS WHEN FOUND

Taken to McAlister Hospital, Waukegan, Where Medical Aid was Summoned, but He Died Sunday Evening

Calvin Mecartney, 19 years old, son of J. C. Mecartney, a wealthy Evanston real estate dealer with offices in the Borden Block, Randolph and Dearborn streets, Chicago, shot and fatally injured himself on his father's farm one-half mile west of the Beach electric station on the Beach road, Friday afternoon. His family believe he fired the fatal shot while temporarily insane from the heat. His unconscious body was found beside and partly under the porch when they arrived there Friday evening to spend the Fourth of July.

Up to two years ago Mecartney attended the Northwestern Academy at Evanston. He was a star athlete and was the youngest man to play on the A. U. championship basketball team three years ago. Two years ago he left school to accept a clerkship in the general offices of the Northwestern railroad in Chicago. The work proved too confining to one of his temperament and two months ago his parents purchased a 30-acre farm near Beach, three miles north of Waukegan. He had been earning for this, hoping to recuperate his health by the strenuous out-of-door work. The unusual work in the sun is believed to have been too much for him.

On Wednesday night his parents called him up from Evanston and informed him that they would spend the Fourth with him. They say he was all right at this time. Even up to Thursday night he was all right as neighbors saw him working about the yard. That was the last seen of him until he was found by his parents the next evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Mecartney with their son Newell and a daughter, arrived at Beach about 11 o'clock Friday night and went at once to the farm. There was no light in the house and the door yielded to their touch. They searched the house but found no trace of Calvin. Fearing the worst the father and son procured a lantern and started to search the grounds. Then it was they found his body partly under the porch. A bullet from a 32 calibre revolver had entered his left side, piercing his stomach and all vital organs but the heart. Dr. Gourley of Waukegan was summoned and arrived in his automobile. He said there was absolutely no hope of recovery for the boy.

The Larson and Conrad ambulance was summoned and made a quick trip removing the injured boy at once to the Jane McAlister hospital where every attention was given him. His family was at his bedside the greater part of the time.

At the hospital Saturday morning it was said the boy's death was merely a matter of hours. The bullet, after penetrating nearly all the vital organs, lodged in the back. Physicians deemed it best not to probe for the bullet as the action might hasten death.

Mecartney regained consciousness for a few moments when he recognized his parents. He smiled up at them. "Don't worry mother—I'll get well," he told her. The mother broke down and wept. She had to leave the room. The family sought to keep the injured boy's mind from his injury. They are hoping against hope that he may recover. The mother is of a nervous temperament and is nearly prostrated.

That Mecartney made no attempt to shoot himself until noon or after was shown by the fact that he had started to prepare the noon day meal. The dishes were placed upon the table and the coffee pot was still setting on the stove.

His brother is of the opinion that the shooting was very impulsive. He points to the fact that one who has contemplated suicide usually shoots himself through the heart. In this case the boy had placed the gun against the first part of his body it touched and pulled the trigger. He thinks the heat had affected the boy's brain and he did not know what he was doing. After shooting he partly drew himself under the porch.

Later, Mecartney died at the hospital Sunday afternoon.

SYNOPSIS.

Andy Meelen, aged millionaire miner, is dying and orders a will drawn up, leaving all his property to the son of a sister of whom he has heard nothing for years, and who, married name he does not know. Meelen was married years before, but left his wife after a quarrel in which he struck her. He learned later that she and their daughter were dead. The scene shifts to New York, introducing Wilfrid Stennis, who is telling his fiancée, Eunice Trevecca, what he would do if he were the possessor of wealth. In the law office of Carboy, Passavant & Cozine, attorneys for the estate of Meelen, Roger Hewes reports the result of his search for heirs of Meelen. He concludes the fact that he has discovered that Meelen's daughter is living. Wilfrid Stennis replies to an advertisement for information concerning his dead mother, Martha Meelen, and is told that he is the heir to Andy Meelen's millions. He wants to marry Eunice at once, but she resolutely declines. He meets Clara Passavant, frivolous daughter of his attorney. Eunice becomes jealous of Wilfrid's attentions to Clara. He builds a yacht and starts on a trip abroad, the Passavants being included in the party. Roger Hewes, having discovered that the Passavants are the daughter of Andy Meelen, plans to use the information to his own advantage. He proposes to Eunice and is rejected. After two years of safety in Europe, Wilfrid returns and immediately calls on Eunice.

"That was very kind of you," said Eunice as she led the way to the old, familiar room, only a little dimmer and duller than usual, but nevertheless to Wilfrid a very haven of restfulness. "Father will be delighted to see you and hear all about your travels."

"And what about yourself, Eunice?" said Wilfrid, moving closer to her, but not venturing to touch her, although he was possessed with an unutterable longing to take her to his heart as of yore, as she stood there in her fresh, cool beauty—a little more mature, a little more sedate and womanly, and to his tired spirit infinitely grateful and soothing.

"Of course I am glad to see you," she said in a quietly level tone, lifting her eyes to his as she spoke with a steadfast and limpid regard, their depths unshaken by any sign of deep or feeling within. If her heartstrings vibrated little or much, she had herself wonderfully in hand.

Stennis turned away with a half-petulant sigh and dropped into a chair—his old, favorite seat.

"I have been several kinds of a fool since I saw you," he was beginning, when Eunice broke in banteringly:

"Oh, pray don't begin your confessions so soon. I would rather hear about the pleasant things you have seen and done!"

Stennis looked at her in wonderment. This was a new Eunice, altogether out of his ken. She had scented herself by the window, and was already busied over a bit of delicate drawn-work which the slightest tremor of hand or dimness of eye might ruin. Her coolness was disappointing, even nagging. In what school had she acquired this insouciance of voice and manner?

Clearly, he thought, she had not been wearing her heart away during his absence. Perhaps there was a successor to her favor, he reflected jealously.

But then and there he registered a mighty oath that he would try to win her back if he had to begin his wooing all over again.

Thoughts fly quickly as Ariel's girdle, and Eunice's last words had scarcely ceased vibrating on the air than Wilfrid found himself replying, with a smile—

"Must I begin at the very beginning, like the children?"

"From the very beginning," as one of my little Sunday school tots says."

"Well, then—oh, hang it all, Eunice, I can't begin in cold blood in that way! Ask me questions—give me a start. You know I never was famous for tickling and labeling my thoughts."

Eunice laughed quietly—a deliciously low ripple of merriment.

"All right!" she exclaimed, with just a trace of her old occasionally pliant manner. "But I put any impertinent queries, Mr. Stennis, you may decline to answer on the usual legal grounds."

"And what may they be?" inquired Wilfrid, whose wits were certainly not at their sharpest that day.

"On the score that the answer would degrade or incriminate you," she retorted saucily.

Wilfrid drew himself up stiffly, seeing which Eunice hastened to say contritely:

"There! I didn't mean that, Mr. Stennis, but you gave me too easy an opening."

"But if you insist on calling me Mr. Stennis," put in the instantly mollified Wilfrid, making the most of this momentary softening in manner, "I shan't be able to go on at all. It was always 'Will' and 'Eunice' before I went away."

"Ah," said the girl in low and vibrant tones, "we used to do a great many foolish things in those days. We were both rather silly, I dare say. Now you are a man of the world and I am getting to be an old maid, so we must put all nonsense behind us."

"How can she speak that way?" mused Wilfrid. "Nonsense," she called it! Well, perhaps it was. Then aloud:

"It was the sweetest time of my life—I have found that out!" he said fervently.

"You did not think so then!" Eunice flashed back at him with a woman's fondness for a lively retort. She could have bitten out her tongue the next instant, for she was determined that the conversation should not take a sentimental or a reminiscent turn if she could help it.

"That was one of the fool things I started to confess, while ago," said Stennis ruefully, pulling at his fair mustache.

"Confessions are expressly prohibited," said Eunice quickly. "Now I am going to begin my cross-examination. In the first place, are we to congratulate you?"

"For what?" asked Wilfrid blankly.

"Upon your engagement or your marriage to Miss Passavant—I do not know which, not having heard from you"—this with much sweetness—"but the papers have had you engaged and married three or four times."

"Papers be—!" exclaimed Wilfrid. "I tell you, Eunice, that's all off. There never was a word of truth in it, anyway. Why, I haven't seen Clara Passavant for six months!" In his earnestness he leaned towards her, half out of his chair.

"Oh, I'm so sorry," murmured Eunice, bending over her work.

"Are you? And why, pray?"

"Because it always seemed to me a very wise arrangement for both of you. She has beauty, refinement, and social position; you have the money. What more could the world ask?"

There! it was out, and Eunice felt that she could breathe more freely.

"Hard and Bitter, Am I?"

Again and again during the past two years she had schooled herself to make some such indifferent speech as this.

Wilfrid gasped. This was the girl who had promised always to wear his ring; who had assured him that whatever happened she would never cease to care for him!

"By Jove!" he thought, "she's hard as nails! Never gave her credit for that sort of thing!" But aloud he said, with some show of dignity:

"You seem to have left no item out of your calculations, Eunice."

"And what may that be?" inquired the girl, holding her work up to the light and inspecting it very earnestly.

"I didn't care for her in that way," "Poor thing!" Eunice retorted mockingly. "How dreadful! Did she ever find it out?"

"I don't know and I don't care!" exclaimed the blighted Wilfrid. "Let me tell you one thing, Eunice: You are—"

"Now, please don't!" exclaimed Eunice, elevating an admonitory finger. "I can imagine just what you are going to say, and I'd rather you wouldn't. Are you ever going to begin on those adventures of yours? Think of Othello!"

"What has he got to do with it?" Eunice sighed in simulated distress. "It's very easily seen that foreign travel has not broadened your mind to the extent you hoped it would. That, sir, is a classical allusion!"

"I can't see what you are driving at!" protested Wilfrid. "You are not a bit as you used to be. I don't know what to make of you!"

"What went you out for to see?" quoted Eunice, looking at him quizzically, but Stennis chose to ignore this remark.

"Why are you so hard and so bitter—that's what I want to know?"

At this unjust accusation Eunice rose and confronted him, her bosom rising and falling tempestuously at last.

"Hard and bitter, am I?" she repeated, in deep chest tones, and moving towards the door. If the interview were prolonged another moment she felt that she would collapse.

"Hard and bitter!" she reiterated. "Perhaps I am. You made me so! How do you like your work?" And she fled from the room.

Wilfrid found his hat and then the street in dazed surprise. He never dreamed that the sweet and even-tempered Eunice could harbor or give vent to such intensity of feeling. Too late he saw what he had lost. Was it too late to retrieve that loss?

He made his way uptown to the rooms which had been retained for him during his absence, and where by this time his man might be expected to have everything in order. Here too he found his secretary with a sheaf of letters waiting replies, especially a lengthy communication from Carboy, Passavant & Cozine beseeching his personal attention to sundry matters connected with his vast properties. Despite his lavish expenditure, he had not disbursed half his income; consequently there was always a surplus of cash on hand demanding investment. Mr. Passavant had evidently seen his name among the arrivals and lost no time in trying to get at him.

"Tell old Passavant to go to the devil!" exclaimed Stennis irritably. "Or—no—I'll go there myself—I mean, I'll run downtown in the morning. Write and tell him so, please. I want to be alone this evening."

Thus left to himself, he extinguished the lights and went to the balcony open window commanding a view of the Riverside drive and the silver Hudson. Here he sat smoking and "laking stork" of himself until the night was far spent.

The inventory was not a very satisfactory one from any point of view.

Where were his former roscate dreams of serene and supreme happiness which were to become concrete realities with the possession of boundless wealth? True, he had achieved many things which none but a spoiled darling of fortune could have accomplished. He had quaffed the cup of pleasure to the dregs; he had seen and tasted—merely tasted—glided vice; there his innate cleanness of nature and clarity of mind had kept him from any great damage to health or reputation. But that sort of thing was only negative virtue, and he knew it.

If he had wrought no serious harm to others or to himself, he had, of an equal surety, accomplished no good. There must be something in life for him beyond mere spending, eating, drinking, and wearing fine clothes. But where and how to find it? Not among the fashionable and frivolous folk with whom he had cast his lot hitherto, nor among women of the type of Clara Passavant—though she was not by any means the worst product of her guild. Indeed, come to think of it, she was "the best of the bunch." Her influence, on the whole, had made for good; looking backward, he could see how much he really owed her; she had molded him and made a man of him in those early days of his new-found riches, when, without her aid, or in the hands of a woman of commoner clay, he might have gone to perdition.

Yes, he had every reason to think kindly of Clara Passavant. He might have married her—he could now if he chose to say the word. Perhaps that would be the best thing that could happen to him! Eunice had cast him off—justly, of course—weakly ready, in his chagrin, to blame someone else for his own short-sightedness.

He had said that he did not love Clara, which was perfectly true. Was there in the world any such thing as love—real, pure, disinterested love? Once upon a time he had thought so—but now?

Too late he discerned that in letting Eunice Trevecca slip through his fingers he had lost what might have proved a sheet-anchor for happiness. With her by his side as guide, counselor, friend, and wife, what might he not have accomplished! Was it too late? It looked that way.

Nevertheless, the next night found him in Greenwich village again. This time old John Trevecca was at home, and the evening passed in recounting his adventures and in going over some choice photographs he had gathered together for Eunice. But not for an instant did she permit herself to be alone with him; and although he called again and again, on many successive days and nights, he never succeeded in seeing her tetatete.

How was he to establish himself anew in her good graces, how win back the footing he had spurned, if she never gave him the chance? And so, for want of anything better, and to still regret, he took up the gay round and routine of social diversion and fashionable trifling where he had left them off two years before.

One other thing he did, however. On a beautiful site, near what is now called Cathedral Heights, he began the erection of a dwelling which would embody all his old ideals of what such a place should be, enriched with the newer ideas picked up during his travels.

And to Clara Passavant and her friends it began to seem as if, after all, she might, at some day not far distant, become the mistress of this worthy addition to the millionaire houses of New York.

Of No Use.

"When I was your age," sold the man to his little son. "I was the best behaved boy in town. My parents would not allow me to play in the street; they made me keep my face washed and my hair brushed; they compelled me to be well-mannered at all times, and I was sent to bed early every night and awakened early in the morning. My parents trained me to be a model, obedient, polite boy. Why can't you be like I was at your age?"

"But, papa," answered the lad, "what would be the use? It doesn't seem to have done any good in your case."

Such a Waste.

Sculptor (to his friend)—"Well, what do you think of my bust? Fine piece of marble, isn't it?" Friend—"Magnificent! What a pity to make a bust of it! It would have made a lovely washstand."—Titt-Bits.

JEFFRIES PUT OUT

COLORED MAN PROVES HIMSELF
SUPERIOR FIGHTER.

AGE OUTMATCHED BY YOUTH

Former Champion Proves Unable to Exchange Blows with the Husky
Colored Man, Now King of the Prize Ring.

By W. H. McLAUGHLIN.

Reno, Nev.—Jack Johnson showed that he is clearly entitled to be called the greatest heavyweight fighter in the history of the prize ring when he knocked James J. Jeffries out in the fifteenth round of their encounter in the arena here. A most remarkable knockout it was. Near the close of the round Johnson put in a left to Jeff's jaw and followed it with a right. This was right near Jeff's own corner. The former champion staggered to the floor of the ring and as he rolled over the bell sounded. This, if noticed by the ring officials, would have given Jeff a chance to rest for the minute interval between rounds, but apparently everybody, principals, referee, timekeepers, seconds and advisers had lost their heads and the bout went on. Johnson, setting himself as Jeff arose, pounced on him again and pounded him across the ring. Again and again he sent Jeff to the floor and through the ropes in almost the same spot. Jim Corbett, Abo Attell, Roger Cornell and Bob Armstrong boosted the semi-conscious Jeff to his feet, but Johnson was there once more and smashed him a right to the jaw that sent him down for keeps.

Jeff did not lose consciousness. He had an awfully tired and sheepish look as they half led, half carried him to his corner, a heartbroken, disappointed man on whom the agony of defeat was written in lines more strongly than pen can portray.

As soon as it was seen that the most sensational contest of prize ring history was over there was a scramble for the ring. From every side the crowd surged forward and climbing over seats and benches they swarmed within the ropes. Jeff, bleeding from a score of cuts and bruises, sat in his corner trying to understand what his seconds and other friends were telling him.

"What's that?" was the burden of his conversation, as he gazed about.

"Cheer up, Jim," said Corbett, "you did the best you could."

"Not a lot was it?" said Jeff a few minutes later.

Jeff rested a few minutes before he was able to steady himself enough to make his way out of the ring and to the room where his handlers took hold of him and brought him back to condition.

In the meantime, the police, the deputy sheriffs and the special constables were having a hard time of it trying to clear the ring. Chief Burke of the Reno force hustled men off the platform right and left. The deputies and constables helped and soon the platform was quite clear. About a dozen men, with big wild west revolvers, formed a guard around Johnson as he left the ring to go to his quarters. There was not a sign of hostility toward the black as he worked his way along one of the runways leading from the ring, in fact it was apparent that his victory was neither a surprise nor a disappointment to a big crowd who watched the fight. As a whole the fight was a sorry spectacle. Jeff never showed from the start enough speed or skill. He did not attempt to box with the negro.

LIKES HAWAIIAN PRINCESS

Washington Society Finds Delegate's Wife Rapidly Adapts Herself to its Usages.

Washington.—One of the most striking figures in Washington official life is "Princess" Kalaniana'ole, wife of the delegate from Hawaii. Since the election of "Prince Cupid," as he is popularly known, to congress, ten years ago, he and his wife have established a reputation for hospitality and have made a large circle of friends.

"Princess" Kalaniana'ole, to give her the Hawaiian title, never fails to attract much attention at social functions. She is a fine type of Hawaiian womanhood and dresses sumptuously in the brilliant colors of which her countrymen are so fond. She is unusually tall and carries herself in the regal manner which is characteristic of her people. Princess Kalaniana'ole is fond of society and has readily adapted herself to Washington social conditions.

Before her marriage to the son of Hawaiian royalty Princess Kalaniana'ole was Elizabeth Kahanu Kanuwai, daughter of a native chief of the island of Maui. Her marriage to "Prince Cupid," October 5, 1896, was the occasion of great rejoicing throughout the islands. Princess Kalaniana'ole was educated in English schools and took a finishing course in France. She is a thorough linguist, an artist of no small ability and an especially fine musician. She has been largely instrumental in creating a vogue for Hawaiian music.

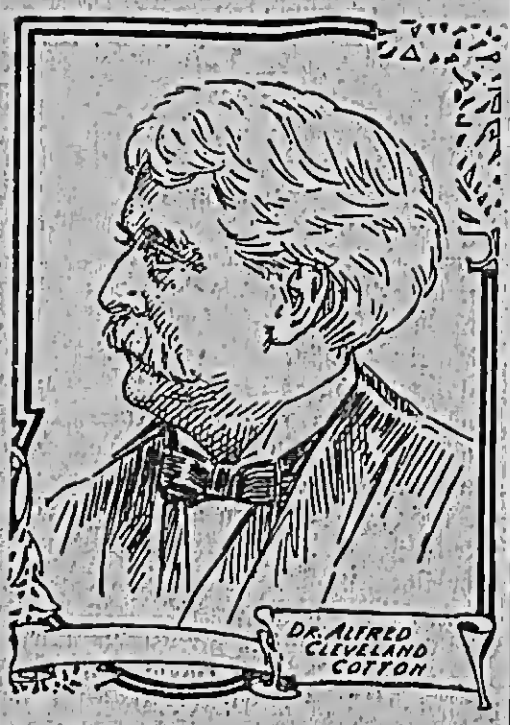

The native instrument of Hawaii, a variety of guitar which lends itself readily to Kanaka folk music, is frequently heard in the drawing room of the two residences in Massachusetts avenue maintained by the Kalaniana'oles. Former Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, the aunt of "Prince Cupid," is a much feted guest when she comes to visit her young relatives.

Princess Kalaniana'ole has a fine collection of native jewelry and curios. Among them is the war helmet of the national hero, Kalakaua I. Some bits of pottery which she possesses are of untold antiquity and are highly valued by collectors. The "hohuka," the native dress of the Hawaiian women, is shown in great variety in a collection made by Princess Kalaniana'ole. The garment is a sort of sublimated mother-hubbard and is often made of costly fabrics and even ornamented with precious stones. The princess possesses, by the way, some of the finest jewelry in Washington.

But He Wasn't.

Senator Depew, in his Washington residence on his seventy-sixth birthday, told a reporter that his health was perfect.

"You do, indeed, sir," said the reporter, heartily, "look the picture of health."

"Yes," said the senator, "I shouldn't have said I was well if my appearance didn't bear me out. A self-contradictory statement is merely ludicrous. You have heard about the census taker?"

"A census taker rang the bell of a Hillier place residence the other day, and an elderly gentleman opened the door."

"I'd like to see the head of the house," said the census taker.

"S-sh! Not so loud! whispered the elderly gentleman. 'Now, what is it? I'm the head of the house?'"

The Luggage Question.

DeLancey Nicoll, lawyer, is always a well-dressed man, and abominates a slovenly appearance. At the Union club he said of a westerner one day:

"He has come on to New York for a week and I don't believe he has brought a stitch of luggage with him."

Here Mr. Nicoll smiled.

"Unless, indeed," he added, "he's stowed something in the large bags he carries in the knees of his trousers."

There's a Reason.

"Paul, if I were to die, should you marry Widow Muller?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Why not? Every one says how like me she is."

"Yes, that's just the reason."

Some people would accomplish a lot more if they didn't waste so much time telling others what they are going to do.

SAVING THE SHAVINGS

by WILLARD G. BLEYER

OUR FORESTS will last but 25 years longer if we continue to cut them at the present rate, declares Gifford Pinchot, former general forester, and one of the best informed men on the forest problem of the country.

The increased cost of lumber, the scarcity of many kinds of woods, the high price of print paper, already bear witness to the forest famine that faces the United States.

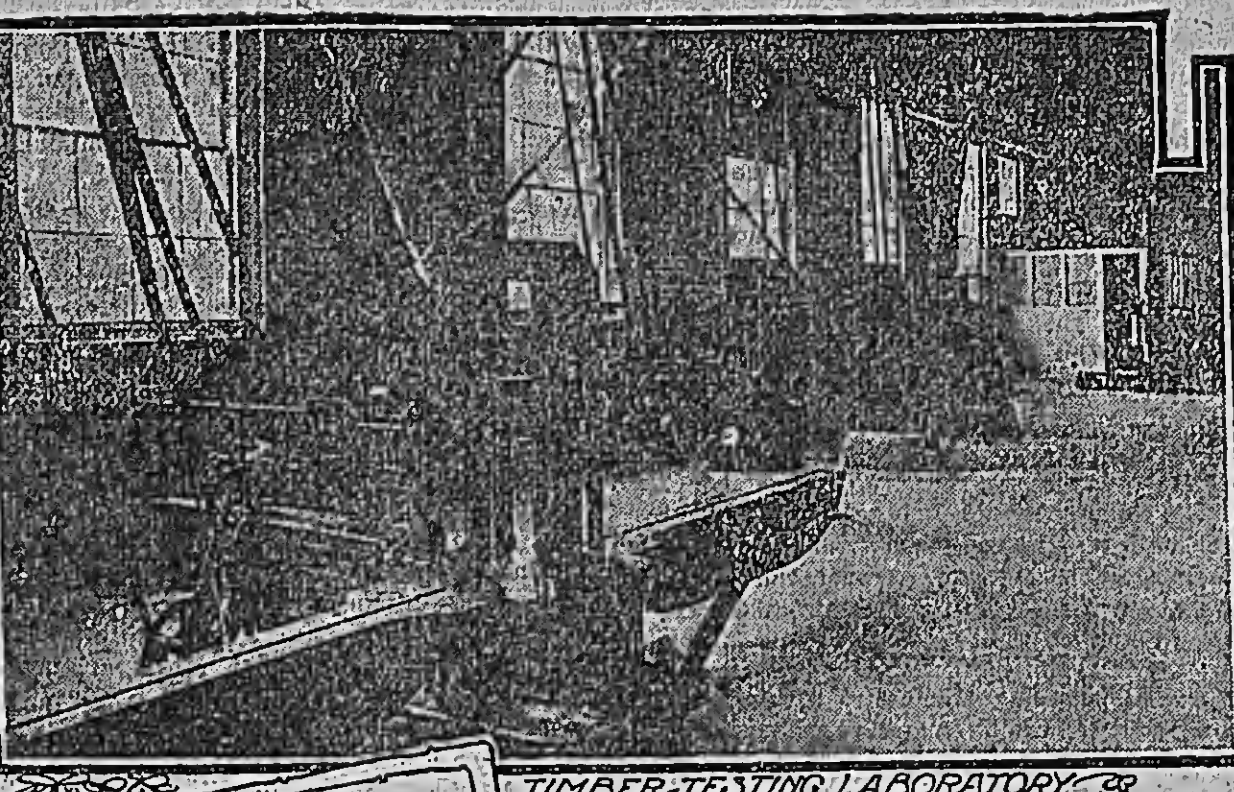

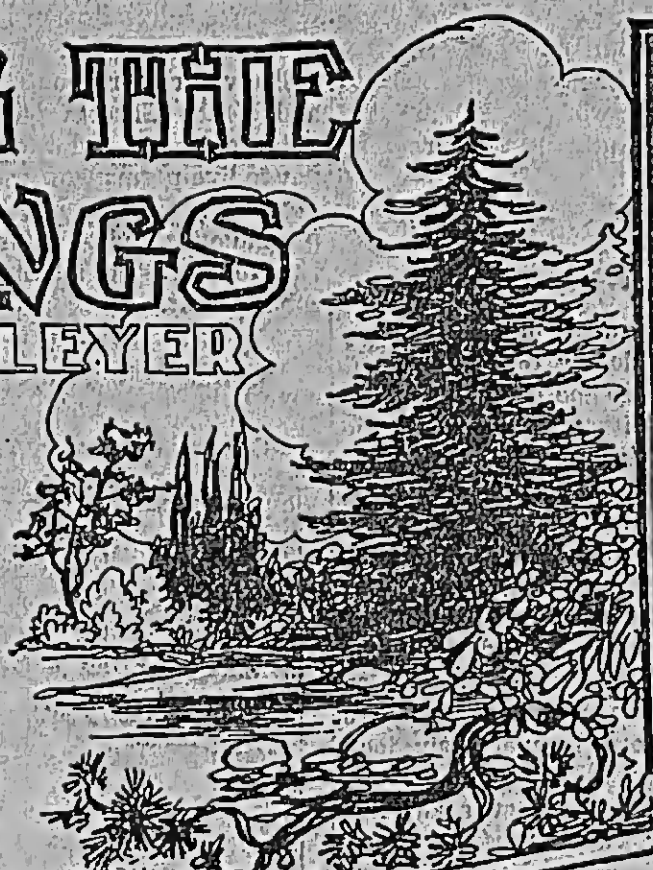

And still only one-third of every tree cut down is now being utilized.

Two-thirds of every one of the millions of trees felled annually, including the big stumps, the beams of branches, cords of stumps and of sawdust are being destroyed, burned up to get rid of the so-called waste.

Incidentally burning over the slashings starts forest fires that destroy annually millions of feet of standing timber.

Now Uncle Sam is going to try to save the shavings and make cheaper print paper, wood alcohol, turpentine and other useful products out of the two-thirds of the tree that is now being thrown away.

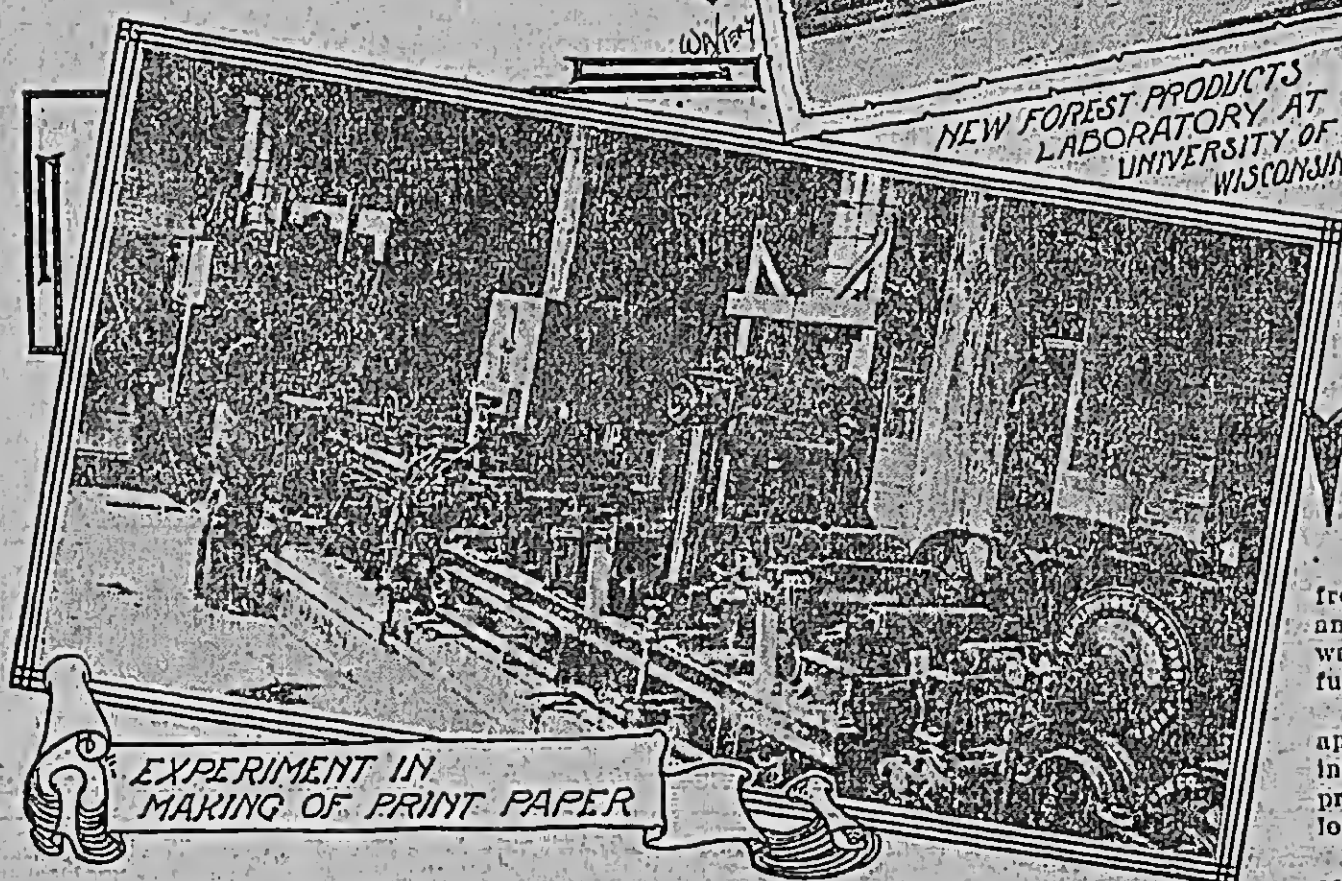

The United States forest service has just established a big experimental laboratory out in the heart of the middle west, at Madison, the capital of the state of Wisconsin, in connection with

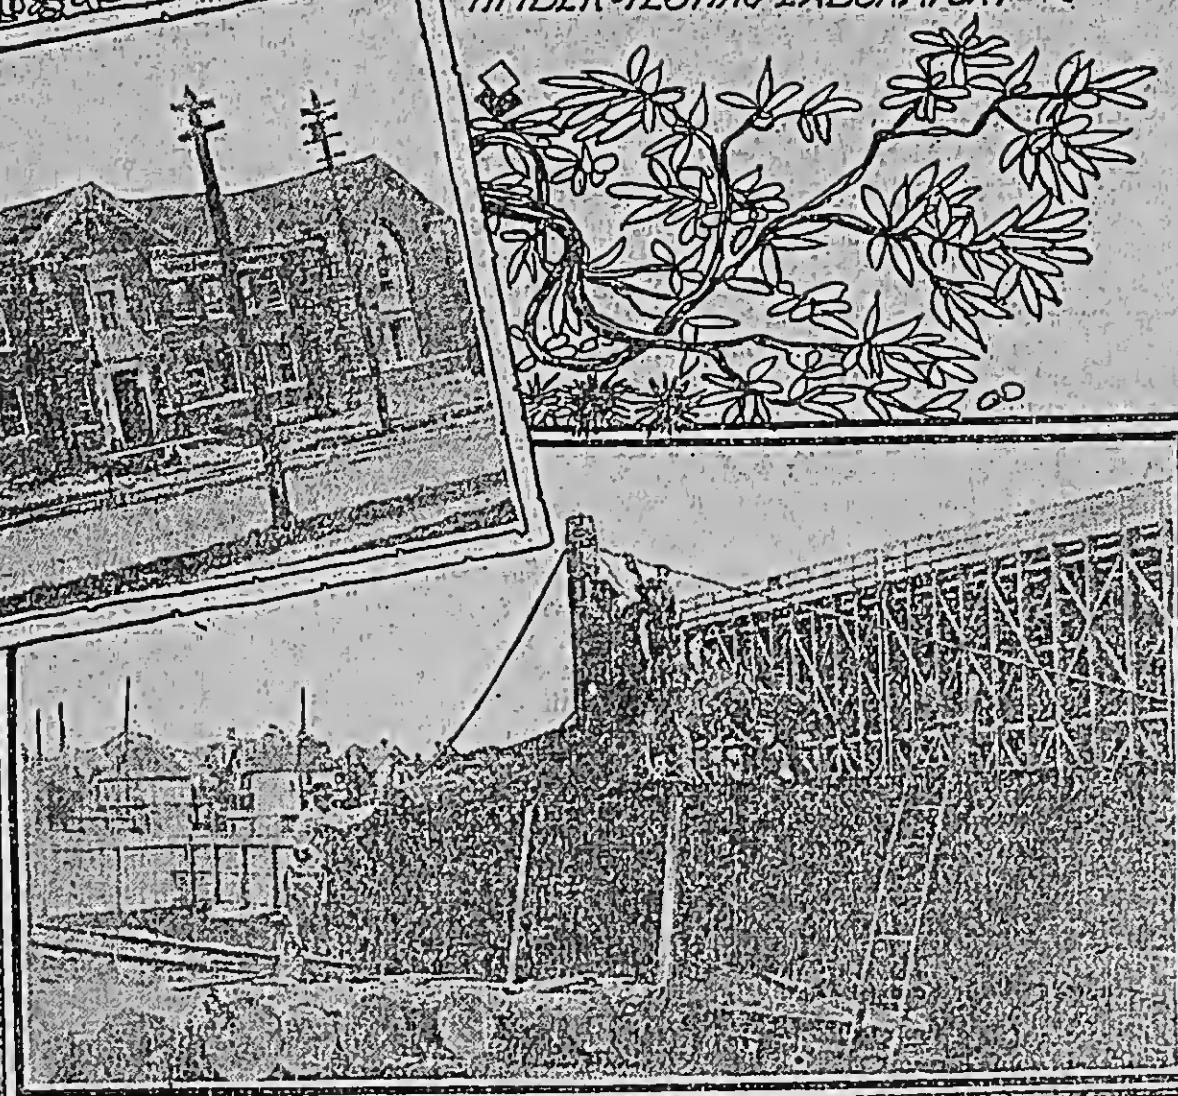

TIMBER-TESTING LABORATORY

NEW FOREST PRODUCTS LABORATORY AT UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

EXPERIMENT IN MAKING OF PRINT PAPER

the state university, in which government experts will attack the problems of these forest products.

The new building has just been formally dedicated and the fine equipment of machinery and testing apparatus, which is to make it the most complete laboratory of its kind in the country is rapidly being installed. The staff of some twenty government investigators has already arrived and been established in the suite of offices in the new building and for some months have been delivering lectures before the students of forestry.

In the new laboratory the United States forest service and the University of Wisconsin will co-operate in the investigations which will be made to solve problems confronting the paper manufacturers, lumbermen, builders and others who deal with the products of the American forests. The building itself, which cost some $50,000, and the site upon which it stands, south of University avenue, between Camp Randall and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks, were furnished by the university. The equipment was furnished by the government at a cost of about $75,000 and the staff of investigators is also maintained by government appropriations. These men, in addition to their laboratory work, will deliver lectures in the regular forestry course of the university. The laboratories, too, although devoted chiefly to the government experiments, are open to the faculty and students for advanced research along the lines of study undertaken by the experts.

The laboratory, which faces north on University avenue, is a fine fireproof building of dark brown brick, trimmed with white Bedford stone and roofed with red tiles, with a 180-foot frontage and a depth of 80 feet. Immediately east of the building a private spur from the railroad carries the lumber into the laboratory yards. A derrick is to be erected north of the track for unloading the big logs and stumps for the experiments from the flat cars. Immediately opposite, south of the track, is to be installed a small sawmill with a saw which will cut timbers up to 20 feet in length.

Already logs of long-leaf, short-leaf and loblolly yellow pine have been sent in to the laboratories by lumbermen and paper manufacturers at Kenwood, La., Hattiesburg, Miss., Thornton, Ark., and spruce logs from the Maine woods. A number of fat pine stumps for the turpentine, rosin and alcohol tests have also been received.

Slides for air drying the lumber line the west side of the yard, which is to be graded and covered with cinders. Immediately back of the building is a deep, cement-lined pit to hold the creosote to be used in experiments until it is pumped out into the laboratory tanks.

The problem of making a satisfactory print paper from materials other than spruce and hemlock is one which will receive particular attention, and for this purpose a complete paper making plant has been made a part of the laboratory equipment. Every process, from the breaking of the wood into chips for the first treatment by soda and sulphite solutions to the final running of the sheets of paper through the calendering rolls to produce a finished surface, will be followed carefully, so that the results of substitution of various woods for the usual materials will be noted at each stage of manufacture.

Both soda and sulphite processes of treatment of the chips will be used and the laboratory will make its own sulphite liquor in a vat adjacent to the digestors, in which the wood is cooked by steam until the lignin is all dissolved and only the cellulose left. A blast of high-pressure steam drives the chips against the side of the digester, further dissolving the cellulose fibers, and then the whole mass is pumped out by a centrifugal pump into a tank in which it is stirred until the fiber is still further broken up. Over and over it is run through "rifler" troughs and over screens where suction draws out the fiber, to be used and leaves behind the small chips, splinters and other waste.

When the liquor has been washed out of it in a washer driven by an electric motor (a contrivance much like the housewife's washing machine) it is put into a press and the water is squeezed out of it. Such of the pulp blocks from the press as are not wanted immediately are then in convenient form to store away on shelves.

After going through the beating engines the refined pulp is run on to the screens of the paper machine and taken up by felt rollers, from which it goes to wooden rollers and then between metal rollers to the steam-heated drying drums, where the wet sheet is run back and forth until it is ready for the final smooth finish of the hot steel calendering rolls. Any grade of paper can be made on this machine, from the roughest brown paper to fine correspondence paper, in a running sheet 15 inches wide, and even a water-marking device is attached, so that the impression can be made on the wet sheet before it goes through the rollers and on to the winding drum at the end.

How to make timber last longer by protecting it with preservatives, from the various borers and fungus growths which attack wood will be another important problem to which considerable time and laboratory space are to be given.

Beneath the building is a great pit, heated by steam to a temperature most favorable to rot, and there, in separate glass compartments all about the walls, are to be samples of timbers with the various fungus growths and animal and insect enemies of the wood attached. The progress of their effect upon the wood will be closely watched and compared with that of the same posts upon samples of the wood treated with different preservatives, prepared and applied in the room above.

A big skylight and many windows make the preservative laboratory an excellent place to work and every facility is provided for testing the various forms of preservatives, and antiseptics to protect timbers, such as those in mines and water-front piers, which are much subject to the attack of minute animals and plants.

Into two great treatment cylinders the timbers are shoved and steam pumps force the oil from tanks above at high pressure into the cylinders. When no more oil will enter the cylinder, even under 150 pounds pressure per square inch, it is drawn off and again returned to the tanks and measured. The difference between the amount drawn off and that originally forced in, deducting the oil collected from the vapor condenser, gives the exact amount absorbed by the timber, which is always weighed before and after treatment as a further means of calculating the oil absorbed.

In a small cylinder the preservative may be applied at a pressure of 600 pounds per square inch for smaller specimens and the resulting protection can be compared with that of the lower pressure preservatives.

Open tanks are provided for tests of preservatives that do not require pressure. These are heated with steam coils and an iron cage hung above lets the railroad ties or other timbers down into the hot oil. By a trolley arrangement the cage can be lifted and run across to other tanks filled with cold oil, so that it is not necessary to pump out the hot oil and replace it with the cold, as in laboratories where there is but one set of tanks.

All about the inner walls of the preservative laboratory are ranged shelves to accommodate the samples of wood for treatment and those already submitted to the different forms of protection against rot and other attacks.

What woods will best stand various kinds of strain, in bridges, buildings and different structures will be determined in the timber-testing laboratory, where two seven-horsepower motors furnish the electric current to run the machinery.

In the torsion machine timbers can be twisted until the strain reaches 30,000 inch-pounds. Five "Universal" testing machines are provided to test the strength of different woods under slow pressure, one having a capacity of 100,000 pounds; another twice that, and three other smaller ones 30,000 pounds.

To see what sudden strains oak, pine, maple and different woods will withstand a Hatt-Turner impact machine was built in the machine shops of the Purdue university and sent to the forestry laboratory for experiments. It can be so gauged that the hammers, ranging in weight from 50 to 250 pounds, can be dropped from heights up to six feet upon the beam or block of wood, exerting a sudden pressure of hundreds of pounds.

In a laboratory where so much machinery is in constant use there must be facilities for instant repairs. For this purpose one end of the laboratory is fitted up into a machine shop. Here, too, much labor is saved by use of electricity to run the engine lathe, milling machine and other necessary apparatus. Beside the anvil there is a gas forge for heating and tempering steel.

The equipment of the wood shop, where timbers and samples of wood are to be prepared for tests, is very complete.

Steam heated ovens for drying wood, in order to test the shrinkage, warping tendencies and water content of different woods are a part of the laboratory equipment, and a portion has also been set off for a seasoning room.

In this connection, in another laboratory, tests will be conducted to discover the heat conductivity of different woods, to assist in the work of the kiln drying and preserving tests.

Stumps and other resinous portions of the trees now burned as trash will be put into stills and retorts and the turpentine, tar and gases will be extracted, carried off, separated and reduced into the various commercial products. If methods of doing this economically can be fixed upon, the problem of utilizing much of the big pine trees now wasted will be solved.

All of the many chemical tests made necessary by the work of the different departments will be centered in a big chemistry laboratory on the second floor, where eight large windows on the east and south furnish admirable light, and eight stone tables, besides those running all about the room beneath the windows, give room for the apparatus and experiments.

As some of the tests will produce strong fumes, there are tables encased in glass with hoods and ventilators above to carry off the smells and small doors through which the experimenters will work.

A corner room is set apart for special work in distilling turpentine and other products and special unlighted space is provided as a chemicals storage room. Still other unlighted spaces are reserved as photographic dark-rooms and record vaults for the safe keeping of the valuable reports of the work done.

One of the most interesting offices is that of the pathologist who has charge of the experiments with the fungi and other enemies of the woods. Upon his desk are large collections of glass tubes containing cultures of every sort of vegetable growth which feeds upon wood fibers, and samples of all the minute animalcules which attack timbers. Many he secured last summer in his visits to mines in different parts of the country, since one of the greatest sources of the dangerous mine cave-ins is the destruction of supports by these little enemies.

A large drafting room, lighted from the north and east, a library and filing room, a lecture hall and a suite of 17 offices for the staff officials and their clerks and stenographers complete the building arrangements below and in the attic a space for storing materials which cannot be left in the open yard and which is reached by an elevator from the basement.

The government will appoint to regular work in the laboratory, as an addition to the present staff, several of the students who have been doing forestry work the past winter at the University of Wisconsin.

The forestry lecture course of the university, just closed, included this year, besides the regular work under State Forester E. M. Griffith, lectures by W. L. Hall, assistant forester at the Washington office; R. S. Kollogg, who holds a similar position; Franklin H. Smith, in charge of the wood utilization office of the government at Chicago; H. F. Wells and H. S. Bristol, assistant directors of the new laboratory; L. F. Hawley, in charge of the wood distillation of the laboratory, and Frederick Dunlap, in charge of the kiln drying investigations.

At the time of the formal dedication of the laboratory the various departments of the government work were in full operation, that the visitors may see the actual work in progress—just how paper is made; how stumps are distilled; and how the little marine animals are prevented from boring through shipplank.

The staff of the new laboratory is as follows: McGarvey Cline, Purdue '04, director; H. S. Bristol, Yale, and H. F. Wells, Yale, assistant directors; H. D. Tlemann, Stevens Institute of Technology, in charge of technology; Ralph Tholon, University of California, mechanical engineer; W. H. Kompter, University of Michigan, in charge of maintenance; Edwin Sutermester, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood pulp laboratory; E. Bateman, Yale, in charge of chemistry; L. F. Hawley, Cornell, in charge of wood distillation; Frederick Dunlap, Cornell, in charge of kiln drying operations; F. W. Bond, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood preservation; C. T. Barnum, Cornell, and C. P. Winslow, Yale, engineers in wood preservation laboratory; J. A. Newlin, Purdue, in charge of timber tests; H. E. Surface, Ohio State university, engineer in wood chemistry; H. E. McKenzio, University of Maine, engineer in timber tests; C. J. Humphrey, University of Nebraska and Cornell, pathologist, and A. W. Schorger, Ohio State university, chemist.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910

Roosevelt and Taft have met. So have Johnson and Jeffries.

The glorious Fourth is over but we have got Thanksgiving day to look forward to.

A minister in Chicago said last Sunday that Busse was a reformer. How will Fred take that?

Mr. Cenn of Woodstock persists in making the congressional issue no snap for Mr. Snapp of Joliet.

The carnival at Waukegan has come and gone. The moral uplift resulting should be breathed in whispers.

The world do move again. The prize fight is over and the city papers can now make a little space for some other things that will go on.

With Taft at Beverly, Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, and Joe Cannon at Danville, three states are the whole thing and Illinois is one of them.

Len Small has been appointed to the subtreasurership in Chicago. This makes your Uncle Joe Cannon laugh out of the business end of his mouth.

LaFollette and Roosevelt have had a little talk together. Any time you lose Wisconsin in the fireworks—well, it's because you can't lose her, that's all.

The statesman who can revise the rain schedule would cut more figure the last month than the one who could revise the tariff schedule. That is, around here.

Another thought produced by the drouth: Why not elect Johnson, the smoke, governor of Nevada? New York has sent more than one prize fighter to congress.

The colors will not fade. We have got to have Browne, White, etc., all over again because twelve men can't get together in a jury box and think the same thing.

The Illinois Supreme Court has decided that the Bible cannot be used as a text book in the public schools. Let us hope it will not cut out the chaplain in the legislature.

A man by the name of Drinkwine is sprinkling the streets of Waukegan with oil to lay the dust. This seems to be a case of turning wine into oil, not water into wine.

The mountain has come to Mahomet. In other words Roger Sullivan is going to work with Ex-Mayor. Dunne in the next Chicago campaign. Oh Roger, can you now get yours?

A member of the state board of equalization died the other day and in probate he was found to be a millionaire. The News has already suggested that there are others.

Roosevelt has publicly announced that he has not fought his last political battle. Up to date Wall Street hasn't called for a home coming celebration to make merry over the declaration.

The people over in McHenry county are still busy trying to figure out how a waterway through Will county is going to help them any. With Shurtliff's facts before them they will soon be ready to throw up the job.

The Waukegan Gazette seems to realize that something is going to be doing over here in the western part of the county. It reprinted the News editorial of last week concerning the hoggyh propensities of their politicians.

That Waukegan fish hatchery bill and also the one for a life saving station never came out of the committee in the last congress. Now the Waukegan papers are intimating that Foss is not as great a statesman as they thought he was.

The Devine Catholic church of America a misnamed new crank religion has been established by a brother of the late Elijah Dowie. We ought to get him to come up to Lake county with it. Perhaps we can get some more free advertising.

A woman received a divorce in Chicago from her husband because when he took her on a picnic he always selected a cemetery for the gala event. Some of the county candidates will take their political ambitions to the same place next September for a celebration but the divorce will have already happened.

It was Gov. Deneen who killed the fish bill by his veto after it had passed both houses. This was the Smith bill, the one that interested Lake County. There will be another fish bill the next Session which will be like the one introduced by Capt. Smith and was never tainted with graft that will be passed again. Will Gov. Deneen dare veto this one?

If Gov. Deneen could only keep on and make this shedding of tears copious enough, because of the graft he thinks he has suddenly been brought face to face with, why there would be nothing to his pet hobby, the waterways problem. He could have a sixteen foot channel from Chicago to St. Louis without ever costing the tax payers a cent. Its an ill wind that blows nobody any good.

Peoria is the largest whiskey manufacturing city in America. It shows the indifference of the churches down there to the business instinct when they will brazenly advocate a one o'clock losing hour for saloons. This means, in cold blood, that they are demanding that for four hours out of the twenty-four no man will have an opportunity to buy a drink. To what extent are the local optimists going in their mad career!

Startling If True

There was a rumor in Washington, just before the close of the session, that Congressman Foss had been detected in shaking hands with an insurgent in the lobby of the House. Immediately following this was another rumor indicating that he had accepted a cigar from an acquaintance who was a standpatter. We say, perish the thought in either case. We have too much confidence in the discretion of our beloved representative to believe he could so side step as to cause the vile calumnies that are abroad. How could he ever again look the man in the face who walks barefooted over upturned carpet tacks without a puncture, were those base canards true?

He Who Laughs Last

The Gazette of Waukegan in commenting upon an editorial that recently appeared in the News makes the suggestion that the editor move to Waukegan if he thinks the lake city is receiving more than its share of the county favors.

This is all very well and is the usual levity that the rest of us receive when we ask for fair play at the hands of the Waukegan politicians. This is just the thing that the News is growing tired of, this levity, this passing it off as a joke when a just demand is made that they vote square over there.

The Gazette mistakes when it waxes funny for the News editor is a candidate for no office. He is not expressing merely his own opinion but an idea that is widespread and that is arousing more indignation and coming to the surface more every day in this part of the county.

The invitation to reside in Waukegan is indeed a generous one but Antioch looks mighty good when weighed in the balance with typhoid germs, carnival contaminations, vaudeville pictures in the churches and fish hatcheries that don't hatch.

But to be serious again those Waukeganites can keep on laughing at our supposed impotence but some day they are going to wake up with the laugh out of the other side of their mouths. They may see something this September that will cause their merry ha, ha, to sound more like a weep to an innocent bystander.

The voters hereabouts mean business and if the Gazette doesn't think so we will reciprocate and ask its editor over, not to live permanently so far from the maddening throng, but just to look the ground over and see for himself that the News was not making an idle personal threat.

The habit of the city to slur the country is an old one but Waukegan is not so big or the county beyond so joy-like or moss-backed that it is going to be weak much longer.

The lane, not the boulevard, is going to turn.

Human Fallibility.

Every man hath in his own life sin enough, in his own mind trouble enough, in his own fortunes evil enough, and in the performance of his offices fallings more than enough, to entertain his own inquiry.—Jeremy Taylor.

Anglo-Saxon Bread.

The food of the Anglo-Saxons was largely bread. This is shown by the fact that a domestic was called a "loaf eater," and the mistress of the house was called a "loaf giver." The bread was baked in round, flat cakes, which the superstitious of the cook marked with a cross to preserve them from the perils of the fire.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this concerns offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

HIS PLATFORM

"I favor the economical expenditure of public monies and the immediate abolition of old time extravagant methods. I favor laws that will be beneficial for the farmers, dairymen and stock-raisers of this great commonwealth, the municipal control of gas, electric and water systems, the establishment of good roads and an economical system of expenditure for their permanent maintenance, convict labor to be used as far as possible. I favor the passage of laws that protect the members of fraternal insurance organization, against the encroachments of powerful old line insurance companies. In am opposed to any cheap waterway legislation by this state until such time as the Federal Government assures its financial support of the project. I am for the rigid enforcement of laws governing the practice of medicine and surgery, and the enactment of such laws as will protect the people against unscrupulous practitioners. I believe there should be just and equitable measures of protection to employer and employee, the conservation of all our national resources, the encouragement, support and advancement of all our public, educational and charitable institutions, in order that they may be placed on the highest plane of efficiency."

COLD ICE-BOXES

A wooden ice-box is a money-waster. It falls down on the one big ice-box requirement—it doesn't keep the cold in. Most of them are half below ground. Moisture outside and it soon starts to decay—repair expense quickly follows. The heat stays out and the cold stays in, in a Marquette Concrete ice-box. Dampness, which destroys wood and rusts iron, hardens Marquette Concrete. The Marquette Cement ice-box will far outlast your time, without one cent's worth of repairs. It's easily made with unskilled labor and materials are inexpensive. We'll gladly send you details for making an ice-box with Eskimo Candy.

Tallow is the Eskimo's candy. It is put up in bright red packages made out of the feet of water fowl. The women cut off the red feet of this bird, which is called the dovekie, draw out the bones and blow up the skin so as to make pouches which they fill with the reindeer tallow for their little folk, according to a writer in Fur News.

None of the food that the Eskimos eat seems very inviting to us, but they are extremely fond of it and are very apt to overeat. It is said by explorers who have gone into Greenland that it is no uncommon sight to see an Eskimo man who has eaten an enormous meal of the raw, frozen flesh of the reindeer, seal or walrus lying on his back and eating blubber until he cannot move.

Live by Catching Fireflies.
In Japan there are people who obtain a livelihood by catching fireflies. These flies are used as ornaments at social festivities. Sometimes the insects are kept caged, sometimes released in swarms in the presence of the guests. The firefly hunter starts forth at sunset with a long bamboo pole and a bag of mosquito netting. On reaching a suitable growth of willows he makes ready his net and strikes the branches with his pole. This jars the fireflies to the ground where they are easily gathered up.

Ancient Knives of Stone.
Herodotus tells us that the knives used by the Egyptian surgeons were made of stone. The first mention of knives anywhere speaks of them as being of stone, so they must date back to an ancient epoch.
